THE WHITE VEIL BECOMING AND DRESSY.

One of the New York summer fads has been the white lace veil, which has been seen draped over elaborate feather-trimmed hats and simple straw sailors alike. These white veils are so becoming and softening to the face that they are being worn over new fall turbans and felt hats also. Sometimes the veil is draped loosely in the manner illustrated. In other cases it is placed on the hat with the pattern edge on top—over the hat, the lower edge being drawn up beneath the chin and pinned firmly at the back.
